Officially, it's the Illinois Secretary of State office's "Inhibit List." The list of 5,577 license plates represents combinations of letters and numbers that can be dirty, offensive and sometimes pretty creative but won't get stamped on your vanity plates. The office keeps a running list of plates that have been requested and deemed offensive, and also proactively adds words they don't want to see on the road. # Yep, pets still need homes

o ⊚elliottserrano

I'd like to think I'm the type of person who keeps up with the times, always staying informed of the current trends and developments in the world. That's not all that hard to do these days, what with information so readily available on our laptops, tablets and smartphones.

So you can imagine my surprise when I learned that the issue of homeless pets and pet overpopulation had been resolved. No longer do the nation's animal shelters have to struggle to find homes for the millions of unwanted dogs and cats! Gone are the days where these unfortunate animals would be euthanized simply because there weren't enough people willing to give them a good home!

I came across this startling revelation when the Best Friends Animal Society, a Utah-based shelter, released a survey last month in which 46 percent of respondents ages 18-34 said they would rather buy a pet from a breeder or pet store than adopt from a local shelter.

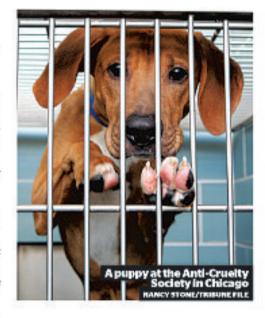

We're talking about Millennials here-the ones who grew up with the information superhighway at their fingertips - so you just know they're aware of current events.

As I read this statistic on my tablet, I looked at my dog Banky-whom I adopted from the Anti-Cruelty Society years ago-and said, "It looks like animal shelters are no longer needed! No more homeless pets, girl!"

She looked at me with an expression that said, "What are you talking about?" Or it could have been saying, "When are you feeding me?" Either way, she wasn't happy.

I checked my Twitter lists, Google alerts and RSS feeds to seek out this historic announcement for pet lovers everywhere. Nothing.

I looked at the Chicago Animal Shelter Alliance website to find a press release. Surely they would have news on solving the pet overpopulation problem. Nada.

Finally, a search of the Chicago Animal Care and Control website revealed what remains the disheartening truth: In 2012, CACC took in a staggering 19,524 dogs and cats, placing 55.84 percent and euthanizing 8,149.

National estimates for the number of animals euthanized in shelters annually range from 3 million to 4 million, which should come as a surprise to some respondents of the Best Friends survey, 40 percent of whom said that animals are safe in shelters.

In spite of what some would like to believe, animal shelters still are dealing with a pet overpopulation problem that costs millions of dollars and the lives of millions of animals-all despite efforts to engage the public in every form of social media there is.

It appears that when it comes to companion animals, the generation that should be the most aware-since we have access to more information than any previous generation-has decided to be the most ignorant.

For a generation that can look up the answer to almost any question on their portable devices, there is no excuse. Remember that the next time you ask, "How much is that doggie in the window?"

By Dana Moran I REDEVE

MTV celebrated its 30th Video Music Awards on Sunday, so naturally we had to take a little trip back in time. Would that whole 'NSync rumor come true? (Of course it would.) Would Lil Kim get her boob bounced? (Of course she would not.) For a modern twist on the classic, here are our most GIF-able moments of the night. #### It's gonna be him

Well, we weren't planning to buy tickets to Justin Timberlake's February show, but we damn well might have to now. Taking a trip backward and forward through time, JT started with his first solo hits, teasing us just long enough to send the anticipation level through the root. AND THEN INSYNC DID THE "BYE BYE BYE' DANCE. And then Justin had them sucked back into the ether a la Destiny's Child at the Super Bowl. The whole thing was perfection redefined.

Gaga egg face

While Gaga wore a seriously boring dress on the red carpet (by her standards), she really brought it with the costume changes for her first post-surgery performance. While the mermaid shells and bodysuits were great, the opening shot of the Gagster as a giant white egg face head thing was priceless.

Miley Cyrus' 'Blurred Lines'

Shockingly, the final votes for the award for song of summer were tallied before Miley Cyrus officially murdered "Blurred Lines." Sorry, Robin Thicke, it's dead to us now. (One Direction won MTV's version of the award, BTW)

Surprise! It's J-Hud

After an intro by A$AP Rocky and gay pro athlete Jason Collins, Macklemore and Ryan Lewis performed their equal rights hit, "Same Love." But the best part was their special backup guest-Jennifer Hudson! And she looked fan. tas, tic, Chicago represent!

Roaring firework

They do that, right? Katy Perry closed out the night under the Brooklyn Bridge, bookending the new singles game with "Roar." While we enjoyed the boxing theme, maybe don't include ring card girls in teeny bikinis if you're performing a song about female empowerment? Just a thought.

Taylor Swift's big win

Taylor may not have won Goat Scream of the Year (although she totally did), but she DID manage to pick up the trophy for best female. And thank the guy who inspired the song. And then MTV panned to Harry Styles. Bahaha.

All eyes on schools after budget cuts, closings

Chicago Tribune

About a year after a strike shut down Chicago Public Schools for seven days, 403,000 students return to classes Monday in a district shaken by school closings, hammered by budget cuts and forced to confront safety concerns with an unprecedented increase in security.

It figures to be another turbulent year as Mayor Emanuel presses forward in his quest to fix the city's broken school system.

"This year it's much worse because of the cuts, the closings and the chaos," said Wendy Katten of parent group Raise Your Hand. "I don't know how schools are going to run on this budget. How are they going to run with the amount of reduced staffing? How are teacher preparation times going to be covered?"

Chicago Public Schools starts the year with 47 fewer elementary schools-two more will close later-and one less high school program, moves that affect 12,700 students. There will be fewer teachers and staff in schools: The district laid off more than 1,000 employees over recent months. About half that number were teachers, but that will be countered by the hiring of about 1,000 teachers for vacant

New will be more than 600 yellow-vested Safe Passage workers hired to get kids whose schools were closed to their new schools safely. Early results of the Emanuel administration's hotly contested decision to close so many schools in a single year will be watched closely, said Tim Knowles, director of the University of Chicago's Urban Education In-

"The mayor has to make sure the execution of the school closure and the reassignment of kids happens effectively and that people don't overreact or panic if there's one or two glitches, rather to keep their eye on the ball," said Knowles, who was on the mayor's transition team after Emanuel was elected in 2011.

The district has poured millions of dollars into the schools taking in students displaced by closings. In addition to cosmetic additions such as air conditioning, 17 of those schools also are getting stronger academic curricula through STEM-science, technology, engineering and math-and International Baccalaureate programs, which also cost more money.

THE NUMBERS

Chicago Public Schools officials say 91 percent of students from closing schools are enrolled for school this year, and most of those who are enrolled, 78 percent will be going to the schools designated for them by the district. The Tribune reported in June, however, that some school administrators were enrolling students without parental approval. resulting in inflated enrollment figures.

THE DIGIT

That's how many 90-degree days Chicago has had so far this summer, according to chicagoweathercenter.com That number is expected to rise this week. Highs in the 90s are predicted Monday and Tuesday with higher humidity potentially pushing the heat index into the 100s, according to the National Weather Service.

U.S.: Syria likely used chemical weapons

6 WASHINGTON A U.S. military response to alleged chemical weapons attacks in Syria appeared more likely Sunday after Washington dismissed the Syrian government's offer to allow U.N. inspection of the sites as "too late to be credible."

A senior official of the U.S. administration said there was little doubt the Syrian government had used chemical weapons against civilians in suburbs of Damascus last week and that President Obama was weighing how to

A year ago, Obama said the use of chemical weapons in Syria's war would be a "red line" for the U.S. However, Obama has been reluctant to intervene in Syria and U.S. officials stressed that he has yet to make a decision on how to respond.

U.S. lawmakers from both political parties urged a limited American military response, such as cruise missile strikes, but a senior Democrat, Sen. Jack Reed (R.I.), cautioned that any move by Washington should not be unilateral.

Tennessee Sen. Bob Corker, the top Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee, said he had discussed the issue with the administration in the past week and believed Obama would ask Congress for authorization for intervention once Congress returns from its recess Sept. 9.

*I think we will respond in a surgical way and I hope the president, as soon as we get back to Washington, will ask for authorization from Congress to do something in a very surgical and proportional way," he told Fox News on Sunday.

RedEye got its hands on keys to the Cell on Sox game day

By Ted Gruber | FOR REDEYE

Fireworks. Food. If you're lucky, a victory. You'll find all this at a White Sox game at U.S. Cellular Field. Though while you're watching the action, a small army works to make fans feel at home—even when the team's record makes spectators a bit uncomfortable. RedEye recently was granted exclusive access to see what goes on behind the scenes while the players are on center stage. TED GRUBER IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

Official scorekeeper Bob Rosenberg

There isn't much equipment in the the official scorekeeper's area. Bob Rosenberg has his official scorebook, a phone, and a microphone to apprise people of his decisions.

"Everything I do is on paper," he said. "No other scorekeepers use anything digital to keep score. Paper is still the preferred method. ... I have saved all my scorebooks over the years and they are stacked at my house going back into 1987. When I go home, I copy all the stats into my own book."

Rosenberg also can be the one who stands in the way of a pitcher's perfect game or a player's hit streak.

With that kind of power comes an occasional difference of opinion.

"I've had coaches speak their mind on rulings I've made before," he said. "It's an interesting discussion."

The White Sox Pride Crew

"Can I have a T-shirt?"

That's the No.1 question asked of Pride Crew members as they make their way around the ballpark. They have heard every reason in the book, from "this is my first game" to "my birthday is this week."

The crew is constantly on the move and has little time to watch the game. They meet a lot of different people every game and are always looking for people to participate in promotions.

"There's 32 pride members, and during weekday games there are 12 people working," crew member Christa Kucik said. "On Sunday games there are 20-plus people working because it's family day and plenty of kids' activities [are] taking place."

Pssst. The crew has an insider tip: If you want to be picked for a promotion, arrive early.

"When the gates open, we will go out through the ballpark and look for certain ages depending on the promotion," crew member Mitch Mangoba said. "We usually pick them way before the game starts and explain things."

angle of the ballpark. They can even see you eat nachos or sip on a soda-not in a Big Brother way, though.

Every camera has a button that controls it on a video board. Visiting with Fusco before a recent game, everything was calm. But once the first pitch was delivered, the atmosphere flipped in a heartbeat and he became the assistant producer, listening to what cameras to switch and what button to hit.

However, much of Fusco's work takes place before the game starts. You know all those video montages? Well ...

"A minute video spot takes about a week to produce and edit, and then the easy part is playing it back onto the score-

Public address announcer Gene Honda

One Sox voice is recognizable throughout the stadium. Gene Honda has been with the Sox for years and has a certain pace for each game. In front of him is a binder with all his reads as well as a headset and a microphone connected to not only the speakers in the stadium, but to the producers in the scoreboard room.

It's Honda's job to introduce each player, which means becoming acclimated to some fairly unusual names.

There's a rhythm with tough names to pronounce; you just have to get it through it," he said. "After doing it for so many years you get used to the pronunciation and just have a certain flow that follows it."

Honda also is the PA announcer for the Blackhawks, and he has to keep his sports straight, of course,

"When I start calling out hockey names during baseball games or vice versa, I think it's time to retire then," he said jokingly.

Head executive chef Olegario Soto

With the spread Soto cooks up every game. chances are your mouth would be drooling for a sample of everything.

Soto oversees every dish displayed for consumption. From meat hand-cut in Galena to handpicked vegetables prepared in multiple oils, the Sox strive to have something for everyone.

Assuring everything's up to snuff can make for a really, really long day.

"I arrive at the ballpark at 8 a.m. and leave around 10:30 [p.m.], about the time the game is over," Soto said. "New meat arrives every day and it takes quite a bit of time to cook and cut it. Some meat can take up to 16 hours to cook."

SEATTLE 17, GREEN BAY 10

Lambeau Field is supposed to feel like enemy territory, but I have yet to visit a friendlier stadium. Friday's game against the Seahawks felt like a Friday night high school game. The atmosphere was spirited without being obnoxious, despite the loss. Fans were more than willing to share their beer—even with someone wearing an anti-Packers shirt. Food is cheap, but order early:
The stadium quickly ran out of cheese curds. It was an easy trip from Chicago, though local hotels were pricey and inventory was low so I stayed 40 minutes away. If you haven't been to Lambeau, get Packing. Go for the stadium history, stay for the collegial atmosphere.

We're using a very strong four-letter word to describe this winter, which is C-O-L-D."

—Farmers' Almanac managing editor Sandi Duncan, to USA Today, on the forecast for the 2014 Super Bowl. The game will be Feb. 2 at MetLife Stadium in New Jersey.

7,000

That's how many athletes competed in the 31st Life Time Chicago Triathlon on Sunday, Hunter Kemper (150:30.9) and Alicia Kaye (2:01:54.9) won the men's and women's professional divisions, respectively.

Ozzie Guillen would be so very proud

White sox bench coach Mark Parent yes, the bench coach—apparently holds a grudge. He was ejected Sunday during the lineup exchange for mouthing off at umpire Jerry Layne, presumably in the wake of controversial calls Layne made during Friday's game. Next time, maybe just let it go?

'Glee' star belts it out for equality

Fans at Saturday's Civil Rights Game between the White Sox and Texas at U.S. Cellular Field were treated to a national anthem sung by "Glee" star Charice. It was her first performance since coming out as gay in June. "I feel so proud to be here today," she told RedEye. "Not only for myself but for other people who want equality for everyone. I'm very happy to be a part of this."

'Transformers' drawn to Bean

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

Whatever the 100 or so extras were frantically running away from during "Transformers 4" filming Sunday at Cloud Gate (better known as The Bean) in Millennium Park, Kelsey Grammer, who plays a villain in the film, was nonchalantly walking toward it. Grammer was on the phone in the scene paying no attention to the scared civilians running past him.

There were no explosions like the ones that went off Friday and Saturday in the plaza at McCormick Place or low-flying helicopters like the ones that glided just above the Chicago River, along Upper Wacker Drive, on Sunday morning. And there was no sign of the sports cars that spent much of the weekend parked outside Blue Cross Blue Shield Tower, including the yellow Camaro known to Transformers fans as Bumblebee.

It was just Grammer and several extras filming the same scene repeatedly, which was good enough for the crowd of onlookers who stuck it out in the hot sun. They raised their cameras whenever they heard the crew yell "rolling" and some inquired about how they could become extras. One fan was shaking with excitement after taking a photo with Grammer, who like, director Michael Bay, had a chair waiting for him with his name on the front and the "Transformers 4" logo

Filming is scheduled to take place Wednesday and Thursday in

Crews work on filming a "Transformers 4" scene Sunday near Cloud Gate In Millennium Park, NANCYSTONE/TRIBUNE

Uptown and will return to Blue Cross Blue Shield Tower over the weekend. One business owner said he was told aerial shots of the Uptown Theatre and the Green Mill will take place Wednesday and that the scene is set in an old town in Texas. (Chicago played the role of Hong Kong during filming at McCormick Place, which featured ads and signs in Chinese)

"Transformers 4" is expected to film in Chicago through Oct. 2 and be released in June.

'Buffy' star fights back

Tribune news services

As the snooty Cordelia Chase in both "Buffy the Vampire Slayer" and "Angel," Charisma Carpenter's character was assaulted at every turn. She was blinded through witchcraft, barely escaped death via the Master's vessel and was the victim of a psychotic girl she snubbed in high school.

But few people know that in real life Carpenter suffered much worse. She survived a horrendous attack by an off-duty police officer and almost lost her life.

That story-and the tale of similar survivors-will be the subject of Investigation Discovery's new show, "Surviving Evil," premiering at 9 p.m. Wednesday.

Carpenter, who hosts the series, says the secret of her survival was the will to fight back. She and two friends were on the beach in San Diego one evening when they were assaulted by a gun-toting stranger.

Her friends were wounded but were able to defend themselves and eventually escape. Carpenter later identified the assailant, who was convicted and remains in jail to this day.

"One of the things that I was told when I was 10 was whatever they're going to do to you when they get you alone is going to be 10 times worse than if they had to do it right there," she said. "So if you're being threatened to get in a van, to leave at gunpoint or knifepoint or what have you, I would encourage at that very moment—to fight back."

Another victim, Lisa McVey, was abducted as a teenager by a serial killer in Tampa, Fla. In spite of the abuse and terror, McVey set about deliberately planting clues wherever she found herself in the hopes that they would lead to her kidnapper.

Her efforts led to the arrest of the perpetrator, and today McVey serves as a deputy with the Hillsborough County Sheriff's Department in Florida.

Pamela Deutsch, executive producer of the show, reports they were able to contact participants in the program from public records and media. "Most of the people that we're profiling in the series are passionate about telling their story. It has some therapeutic benefits, but it also helps to educate and help others."

How to catch a star

Luring Jake Johnson and Olivia Wilde to 'Drinking Buddies' was a snap

When Joe Swanberg tried to convince Jake Johnson to star in "Drinking Buddies," he assured him he wouldn't have to work too hard and that the movie wouldn't make much

"A lot of directors do this fake talk about how it will be the biggest movie of the year and will make you a huge star," Johnson said. "Joe just said we'll drink a lot of IPAs and have a lot of fun."

Johnson, who plays Zooey Deschanel's roommate Nick Miller on "New Girl," was looking for an undemanding gig during his 3-month hiatus from the show. His brother's wife had just given birth to their first son, and Johnson wanted to spend time with them in Chicago.

Since the city happens to be Swanberg's home-and the location of most of his movies-so Swanberg promised he'd have plenty of time to spend with his infant nephew.

Throw in some free beer ... and Johnson was sold.

"Before I got 'New Girl,' I was an incredibly lazy guy," Johnson said. "I spent a lot of time hanging around and drinking and messing around with friends. When 'New Girl' started that was taken away and part of the allure of 'Drinking Buddies' was to have the set be a really fun place."

Johnson is one of four prominent actors who signed up to get a buzz while shooting the movie. Johnson and Olivia Wilde play two close friends who work at Revolution Brewing; Anna Kendrick and Ron Livingston play their respective better halves.

Johnson said part of the appeal of working with Swanberg was the ability to improvise. The director does not write scripts for his movies—just loose outlines of where the story is going.

"Joe has a movie in his head figured out, but he doesn't have the characters figured out," Johnson said. Swanberg considers his actors co-writers, and gives them control over their characters' behavior.

In one scene, Wilde and Johnson build a bonfire at the beach and fall asleep there. Johnson suggested they incorporate that because it's precisely what the cast and crew had been doing after shooting. Then Wilde suggested she up the ante and go skinny-dipping.

> In another scene, Johnson and Wilde were supposed to have a big fight.

"Swanberg wrote Olivia and Jake's characterhuge fight. Relationship at all-time low. Jake leaves. That's all we had," Johnson said.

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD I READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Virgo Aug. 23 - Sept. 22 You could suffer a minor setback in a romance due to Neptune. That guy you adore isn't quite as "separated" from his wife as he claimed.

That girl you pine for isn't just still friends with her ex-the two of them are friends with benefits.

Libra Sept. 23 - Oct. 23 You could become incredibly close to someone. Venus is throwing you and a special guy/ girl together. You'll get stuck in an elevator and he'll cure your panic attack.

Scorpio Oct. 24 - Nov. 21 Pay attention to those pesky little details. Before you get married, sign a pre-nup. Before you move in with a guy, make sure his last girlfriend has already moved out. Saturn is urging you to look out for your own best interests.

Sagittarius Nov. 22 - Dec. 21 A moon opposition is forcing you to face the truth. If your boyfriend disappears every night, chances are that he's not a werewolf. It's more likely that he has another girlfriend. And if your favorite lady never invites you over, she's probably married.

Capricorn Dec. 22 - Jan. 19 Your honey is trying to tell you something, only you're not listening. Your girlfriend wants a commitment after six years of dating.

Your guy is having money troubles. Jupiter says be less self-involved.

Aquarius Jan. 20 - Feb. 18 Mars is moving opposite your sign, so you could experience a sudden reversal in your love life. You thought you were getting engaged, now you're breaking up. You were preparing to have three kids, now your wife has decided she doesn't want any Pisces Feb. 19 - March 20 Just when you thought fate was out to get you, something nice happens. A former flame will confess she's still madly in love with you. A gorgeous guy you just met will ask you out.

Aries March 21 - April 19 Jupiter is showing you that some of your recent decisions may have been ill-advised. Eloping to Vegas with that guy you met at the bus stop? Not such a good idea. Pledging. eternal love to that girl online? Dumb move.

Taurus April 20 - May 20 Don't sit around moping about how lonely you are. The moon is telling you to get out and meet a few people. If you show up at a gallery opening, a concert or a fundraising event, you'll encounter fabulous folks who share your appreciation for fine things.

Gemini May 21 - June 21 A romance that may have had a rough start should finally start to take off. Venus is bringing a spirit of fun an adventure to a new relationship. You'll want to take a hot air balloon ride. go bungee jumping together or try skydiving.

Cancer June 22-July 22 Revenge is sweet, thanks to Saturn. Your loser ex-boyfriend who dumped you lost all his money to a gold-digger. Or that girl who broke your heart in high school now weighs 300 pounds and has six kids.

Leo July 23 - Aug. 22 Mars will be in your sign for a few weeks, making you super lusty. If you're married, you'll regret settling down with every fiber of your being. If you're single, you'll start dating three people at once.

whoville Jason Derulo retired one of his signature moves not his personality By Morgan Olsen | FOR REDEYE When you hear the name Jason Derulo, the first thing that probably comes to mind is the sing-songy tune that's become a signature on

most of his tracks: "Jason Derulooo!"

But that soundbite is missing from his latest single, "Talk Dirty," and it's not likely to appear anywhere on his upcoming album, "Tattoos." After fracturing his neck last year, the 23-year-old singer is closing the door on his past, which includes that five-syllable sign off. "I think it's still kicking in people's heads," Derulo said about retiring the line. "Regardless if I put it in the song or not, they're still gonna sing it."

Cleaning up his past has made room for a serious relationship with "American Idol" alum Jordin Sparks. Though Derulo admits he's not ready to tie the knot tomorrow, wedding bells could be in his near future. "Yeah, marriage is on my mind," he said. "You know, I found that special person ... but when the time is right."

Before performing Thursday in Pioneer Court, Derulo sat down at The Langham hotel and talked about his tattoos, proposing to Sparks and the rules of talking dirty. Because yes, there are rules when it comes to talking dirty.

When you're staying in a hotel, do you ever use an alias or a fake name to hold your reservation?

I do! [Laughs.]

What's your alias?

I can't tell you. Then it won't be an alias anymore, and I love my alias.

Fair enough. Your new album is called "Tattoos." How many tattoos do you have? I have nine.

Which is the most meaningful to you?

I can't pick one that's the most meaningful 'cause they're all meaningful in different ways. But the newest one I got is really meaningful because it's the only one I got outside of ... actually, no, I'm lying. I just recently got it in Bora Bora, and it's a Polynesian tattoo and it's a Tahitian warrior tattoo. And it's one I really like a lot. I have "undefeated" right here [points to left wrist], and they're kinda both the same thing—just after my injury and everything ... just not letting anything overtake me, just to keep things on the up and up.

Any tattoos that you regret?

I have a tattoo that's not my favorite because I don't think the tattoo artist was as good as people told me that she was. ... Yeah, it's a feather painting that goes into birds up to my neck. But I don't really like the way the feather painting looks.

Let's chat about your latest single, "Talk Dirty." What are the do's and don'ts of talking dirty?

You have to do it in a sexy voice. That's a definite do. You don't want to be too rough or too abrasive when you're talking dirty. You want to still be sexy with it. But don't talk nasty. [Laughs.] You don't really want to hear someone be like, "Throw up on me." That's not dirty, that's nasty.

That is nasty. Have you ever sent a dirty text to the wrong person?

Nah, I can't say that I have. That's a fear of mine though. I double-check.

You recently serenaded your girlfriend, Jordin [Sparks], onstage and your next single is called "Marry Me." Is it safe to say you have marriage on your mind?

Yeah, marriage is on my mind. You know, I found that special person ... but when the time is right.

Are you the type of guy who would plan an over-the-top proposal, or would you do something more low-key?

I don't know yet. I feel like I'm the type to do something extravagant though. But Jordin seems to be very simple. But I still would probably do something pretty lavish.

When you injured your neck last year, you wore a blinged-out neck brace. What's become of it?

It's chilling, actually! I'm gonna put it in a glass box, and like have it in the game room.

I heard that you retired singing your name.

Why?

It was just the end of a chapter to me. You know what I'm saying? That's pretty much it ... nothing too serious. It's just like, close that

What do you imagine it doing in retirement?

What, you mean my name in the song? What do I think it's doing?

I think it's still kicking in people's heads. It's still doing its thing and forcing people to sing it. Regardless if I put it in the song or not, they're still gonna sing it. Just because I retired it doesn't mean that everybody else has.

PLUS:

On his guilty pleasure TV show: I don't know if I hate to admit this, but I [bleeping] love "Breaking Bad" right now ... I think I've got one more episode of Season 2. They told me that it's just getting steamy, and I'm like, "What?! Just getting steamy? No, it's [bleeping] amazing right now."

His go-to drink: Vodka tonic. His go-to vodka: Grey Goose.

On ordering flowers for Sparks: You're about to get me in trouble right now. Lilies, I think? I think they're lilies. OK, let's just keep it safe. I'd order just a bunch of roses and a bunch of lilies. I can't think of any other ones.

Retro Miley

Miley Cyrus is feelin' the '80s. She tweeted the cover art to her upcoming album, "Bangerz," on Saturday, and as billboard.com points out, it has a very "Miami Vice" feel. Could that be an indication of the music? We'll find out when the album drops Oct. 8.

Sound of vampires

It looks like that NBC "Sound of Music" adaptation with Carrie Underwood is still happening-and the network has found its Captain Von Trapp, "True Blood" star Stephen Moyer is stepping into the Austrian uber-dad's boots, thewrap. com reports. The probable travesty airs Dec. 5, and let's be honest, we're probably going to watch.

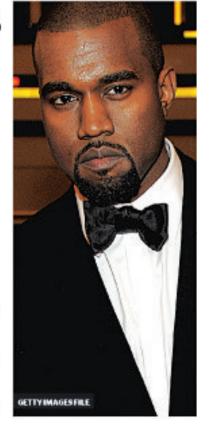

Harry Styles has come to terms with the inevitable: Taylor Swift wrote a breakup song-or three-about him "Everybody writes songs based on personal experience," the One Direction boy bander said in this week's issue of Us Weekly. "At least she's a great songwriter!" The pair split in January after a few months of dating.

Trouble, trouble, trouble...

brand now, and that's family. That's the only brand I care about."

-Kanye West, to Kris Jenner, during his appearance Friday on her talk show. He also revealed the first photo of his baby with Kris' daughter, Kim Kardashian, and we'll be damned if North West isn't freakin' adorable.

That's how old Lena Dunham was when she wrote a sex advice letter to Time Out New York, She posted the letter-asking the proper way to tell a guy she was still a virginto Twitter on Thursday.

It's one of life's last great surprises, and I want to be surprised." Jennifer Love Hewitt, to conline.com, on not wanting to know the gender of her baby before she gives birth. She also professes a huge craving for Mexican food. Us too.
